MAN 'DEAD' FOR 72 DAYS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stanley Wilks, a civilian mathematician for the U.S. Army, spent 72 days in suspended animation in a successful effort by doctors to save his life.

Physicians at George Washington University Hospital had to find a way for Wilks' body to fight off pancreatitis and infections that were killing him.

Wilks was intentionally paralysed with the drug curare, a substance used by some Brazilian Indian tribes on their blowgun darts. Doctors hoped the use of the drug-

Wilks' wife Jocelyn consented to the curare treatment.
"It seemed like a reasonable option at the time," she said. After receiving the curare treatment the 44-year-old Wilks lay conscious between Jan. 8 and March 20, but he was unable to move an eye, blink, utter a sound, move a muscle or breathe without the help of a respirator.

Neither Wilks no Dr. Glenn Geelhoed, the attending Neither Wilks no Dr. Glenn Geelnoed, the attending physician, know what caused the onset of his pancreatitis last November. "He was as sick as one could be," Dr. Geelhoed said. "He had a pseudo cyst, which means his pancreas was eating itself and everything around it."

The pancreas produces the enzymes that digest food, and if the enzymes back up it can begin to digest itself and the organs which are near it.

Wilks' hospital bill was estimated at between $150.000 and $150.000 hour will be covered by a health plan.

Ferry Subsidies

As welcome as the federal govern- damned easterners, this week's anment's $8 million annual ferry subsidy for British Columbia was Monday there is no cause for dancing in the streets or offering hosannas to Otyears late at that. The subsidy goes a little way towards equalizing a patently unequal situation, but British Columbians should know that the $8 million is still a small amount in comparison to the vast subsidies Ottawa pays out on the east coast of Canada.

The Nova Scotia-Newfoundland ferry service alone is subsidized to the tune of $64 million a year. The island province's coastal ferry service gets another $22 million annually while the Prince Edward Island-New Brunswick ferry connection costs the federal treasury $15 million.

is just a recognition of historic inevitability, and the simple injustice of the thing. B.C. should have been getting a ferry subsidy years ago. If it weren't for the proud and stubborn refusal of ex-premier W. A. C. Bennett to have truck or trade with the years ago.

There is greater irony, however, in the agreement's exposure of the tawa. B.C. is only getting its due, and bankruptcy of federal transport policy. Last year Ottawa discontinued $3.1 million annual subsidy to Northland Navigation Co., which was providing a fairly good ferry service to the middle and north coasts of B.C. Northland couldn't keep up the service without the subsidy. A towing company filled the gap, sort of, with a much inferior barge service that requires almost as great a subsidy.

Now with the $8 million subsidy to the provincial government, B.C. is going to start all over again. Part of the money is no doubt earmarked for a coastal service to the small isotated Monday's announcement by communities with no road access and federal Transport Minister Otto Lang expensive, infrequent float plane service much of the year.

But both federal and provincial governments will be mistaken if they attempt to apply the whole of the subsidy to replacing and improving the was granted on the basis that the up north.

The provincial cabinet meets on Thursday to discuss allocation of the subsidy, and application of a good portion of the money towards cutting fares on the southern B.C. Ferries routes should be a priority item on the agenda

The government ferry service between Vancouver Island and the B.C. mainland is every bit as essential to the lives and jobs of 300,000 Islanders as the former private companies' operations were for the few thousand people in the tiny isolated towns along the north coast.

But the squeaky wheel gets the grease. Unless Vancouver Islanders are determined to present their case to the provincial government as successfully and as dramatically as the communities of Ocean Falls and Stewart and others did, then most if Northland ferry service. The subsidy not all of the $8 million will be spent

Disgrace

I see where Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm is at it again. A man fered a reward of $1,000 only to find out he will lose it to money-fingers Vander Zalm. I think this is a damn disgrace. No wonder Vander Zalm is a millionaire. And the other 10 millionaires stand by and let him get away with it. It is a sad day when we have to go back to the workhouse days and be like Oliver. "Please, sir, can I have another $1 or $2?" But these are their kind. They will use you for a doormat if they get the chance. And now I would like to comment on a few remarks made by Jim Hume on one of his radio commentaries, and that was regarding Bennett's achievement re the ferries. As far as I am concerned, Mr. Hume, neither Bennett, nor Strachan, nor Barrett, nor Bennett before can claim the credit. The people of B.C. are the real winners here. Don't forget Trudeau is fighting for Liberal strength in the west and this is one way of trying to get it. I am in favor of a rollback in ferry rates. In fact, my honest opinion is that a toll be instituted on all ferries, for example, $8 for cars, $10 for campers and $1 for people and this. would work out to be fair. But that's just my opinion. — A Times Subscriber.

Ferry Problems

Just how much of Premier Bennett's correspondence is brought to his attention one can only surmise

Hopefully though he will receive many letters expressing the deep concern we on Vancouver Island have relative to the B.C. Ferry system.

We have not as yet, and may not for some years, rebounded from the rugged, unrealistic, uncompromising increase in fees on the major carriers of the ferry syntem, delivered to us last year. The economic structure of this part of our province will not survive another upheaval in the form of a labor strike of personnel on the B.C. Ferries. Before the unthinking news media digest the ramifica-tions of a strike to all of North America, destroying for us, for many, many years the major industry, tourism, Mr. Bennett should make a strong statement, halting the ill effects before they once more get out of hand. This matter justly deserves his immediate care and attention. — Dr. A. H. Lane, President Royal London Wax

We had only been in the building once before we bought it, to confirm the magnificent views and to confirm that the building was old, showing its years of hard service and near the end of its usefulness. We expected the rents to help defray the carrying costs of the property until we were ready to rebuild in two to three years, at which time ample advance notice could be given the occupants.

It was some time after our purchase that the fire marshal's office informed us of their order. Even then we hoped that reasonable modifications would provide for the safety of the occupants and allow the building to stand for a few years. Lt. Best of the Victoria fire department conducted us through the Alkazar, gave us a detailed explanation of the extreme fire hazards and danger to life in the building and showed us photos of the terrible consequences of fires in similar other old buildings. Acting for the fire marshal, he informed us that prosecution was to begin

We determined that was economically impossible to bring this 62-year-old building up to the required modern standards. For example, it would have cost over $100,000 to modernize the electrical wiring and this was only one of the many defects. In addition to the monumental amount of work specified by the fire marshal, it was obvious that the roof was worn out, had been patched and re-patched and was still leaking in a number of places; the metal flashing and gutters were rotted out and the stucco was buckling. Some of the fire marshal's requirements, such as additional stairways, were physcically impossible to do within the existing structure.

Therefore, we met with the occupants of the Alkazar, gave them notice and also gave them copies of all correspondence, including the fire marshal's order, letter from architect D. Hambleton, outlining the economic impossibility of upgrading, and all other details leading up to the decision to demolish. We advised all occupants, in writing, that they did not have to give any notice when they vacated, that we would refund all rent from the day they moved out, that we would pay their moving costs and give them, at no cost, the appliances from their suite, if they needed them in their new accommodation. We also hired a night watchman's service to regularly patrol the building until such time as all oc cupants were safely moved out. Realizing that the whole matter of notice and demolition was sensitive, we sent copies of all of this material to city hall and to the Fairfield Community Association who had been, we were told, interested in the

Having bought it, we did our best to treat the occupants decently and honourably and to do the right thing by them and by the community. Motorcycles

I truly support recreation administrator, Mr. Bill Young's educated and objective advice given to the Saanich council and recreation committee and reported in the Times, Wednesday, April 6. "... consider finding land for motorcy-cle events away from the parks." It is my opinion that Saanich council is violating a municipal bylaw prohibiting motorcycles motorcycle club to race in them. Yet where is their sentiment for the parks themselves? Because of their weakness once a year in allowing the motorcycle club these privileges, the young unlicensed motorcyclist and the aggressive, indifferent motorcyclist use the park as their private playground all year round. During the school holidays last month countless motorcycles made use of the trails around and over Mt. Douglas. I will emphasis the word "over", as erosion begun by the motorcycle traffic is on all sides of Mt. Douglas. On Easter Sunday I counted eight motorcycles on their way into the park despite the sign, No Motor Vehicles

If they are caught, which is rarely, they re given little more than a hand slap, Perhaps Ald. Robert Cameron, who (as mentions in the same article in the Times) is a former club member, can explain why, after 50 years the motorcycle club has not establlished an area for their racing? Perhaps it is because access to our parks is made easy for the motorcycle club by those in a position to "pull-

It is time they faced the fact that the motorcyclists need a public cycle track to call their own. Then, perhaps we can fine those who motorcycle in the parks and the

She should come down to earth and look at social psychology from the inside rather than through her rose-colored glasses. Instead of doling out money haphazardly as did "Swamper Levi", the present minister accepted the respon-sibility of restoring dignity and the feeling of self worth to the unfortunate of our society. Mr. Justice Thomas Berger's $3-million study of the social and environmental impact of a pipeline will be released in early May. The National Energy Board is hearing economic and technical arguments on pipeline applica-tions. And the federal government says it will try to give the United States an indication of Canada's decision on a pipeline by early September In the face of these and other pressures, native groups have already submitted claims to vast tracts of land in northern Canada or are preparing such claims. The breadth of the territory involved is staggering. Nearly 1,816,000 square miles are covered by seven claims, almost half the land mass of Canada land claims involve the rights of more than 40,000 status and non-status Indians, Metis and

As oil, natural gas and mining exploration intensify across the north and the James Bay hydro-electric project Quebec, the native people have tried through legal actions and direct negotiations with Ottawa to protect and define the rights they think they have. Each of the land claims is at a different stage. In Quebec, for example, the Crees and Inuit have already signed an agreement giving them $225million over 20 years and three categories of land on which they have various rights. The bill authoritizing the settlement awaits third reading in

The Inuit Tapirisat, representing Eskimos, has been the biggest beneficiary, receiving more than $3.2-million in grants and loans, according to figures supplied by the federal Depart-ment of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

The native claims are based on the use native people have since "time immemorial" for settlement, hunting, fishing and trapping.

In southern Canada and the NWT, whatever legal title native people may have had over land was signed away in treaties with the Crown many years ago, although many were broken by the federal government. In addition, there a live legal and historical point whether the native people knew what they were signing Many native spokesmen and historians argue that the native people thought they were only signing "friendship treaties" with the whites and not treaties giving away their rights to land. White spokesmen, ineluding a succession of federal spokesmen, claimed the treaties "extinguished" rights to land in exchange for certain guarantees and obligations such as cash payments and government services.

The difficulty in determining ownership of land to which native people have laid claims has been compounded by the different white and native concepts of ownership.

In white society, individuals or groups bought a-clearly defined territory for which they received legal title. Only under exceptional circumcan the title be broken. But in native society, land was never parcelled and distributed among individuals or groups. The landwas considered the base of life, the heritage of all. Thus the native claims are based on the use native people have made of the land, rather than legal title. Under the pressure of resource exploration, the Dene) are seeking settlements which lay out specific rights they will have in trapping, hunting, settlement, for example, in exchange for surrender ing (or "extinguishing" whatever "ownership" they might have had in legal concepts of white society.

Their Minds Are Open

and prelates have been almost pat ly anxious to herald a new religious revival; and particularly among the youngest articulate generation. eagerness has sometimes led them into making extravagant gestures of welcome - stepping forward, as it were, to usher ers into the churches and by that forward step leaving the whole structure of their faith behind them. It seems, today, as if those eager compromisers may have stepped right past the people whose hands they had rushed to grasp. So we have seen the sad, but also the ludicruos spectacle, of men in dog collars both standing on empty air and also grasping it.

Of course there is no such thing as the belief, or even the attitude, of a whole generation. All we can ever do is to note certain currents of faith or disbelief and guess that the more powerful currents are flowing in one direction rather than observation of a rural commune through which some 200 young people have passed over the past three years, and in which nine have lingered for a year or more. * * *

I know very well that the people who associate themselves with a commune are but at least they represent a thoughtful aware that I myself share most, though not all, the belief I have attributed to the others. But who can be sternly objective on such an issue?

It seems to me, then, that the faith of these young men and women is both vaguer and stronger than the faith of any earlier generation in this century. Minds are so open now that almost nothing is dismissed as intrinsically unbelievable. Plants will grow better if they are kindly spoken to; or at least it is possible that they will. Nor it is impossible that our lives are controlled to some extent by the stars we were born under. Perhaps it is true that magical lines of force run to Glastonbury; or from Tintern Abbey to generation: even, at times, a superstitious

But what has remained from that exotic period is a widespread refusal to accept the exclusive claims of any Church or any guru: a widespread conviction that almost any Church or guru will serve if approached in the right way, and if followed with the

But this is not just another sloppy nature of true religion. On the contrary, the search for God is understood to be difficult; and whatever way is followed must reality is God, and the God who is both trusted and searched for is a living spirit of love and hone

There are signs that this will work in favour of something more like traditional Christianity than anything else that has en discovered or concocted during the last half century. But this is not because the orthodox theologies of the Churches are likely to be suddenly accepted as uniely true. I know of no new believer who is an excited reader of Thomas precise meaning of the Trinity. There was never a generation of believers less thoelogically inclined or more determined to find God in spite of definitions rather than by means of them.

The world is sanctified; every person is sacred; God can be found only in love and worship. Falsity of emotion, intellecpyrotechnics, dogmatic selfassurance - these are the enemies of all true faith. And the true faith is increasing ly looked for in the smallest community even in the unmediated relationship of one man or woman to the God of Love:

All this is a great change from the years when Christianity was seen as an essentially activist faith, and politics were thought to be the most important field of Christian endeavor. A social crime like racyalism is now so obviously a crime sary. This means that it is very unlikely that the mediator will rush out from his Yoga session and join a demonstration treatment of Soviet Jews.

that have become both too wearisome and too burdensome? After all South Africa and Soviet Russia are still there, and still to home there is still the pitiful suffering of the old, the poor and the homeless in the centres of our own urban squalor. How can ne who believes in a God of Love be indifferent to this large-scale agony of the

This resurrects the old issue between what Richard Holloway has called in his book Let God Arise the ghetto and the missionary mentalities. Should believers retreat into their little ghettoes, praise God in private and concentrate their attention on themselves and on those who are close to them? Or should they act as the World Council of Churches is now in the habit of acting, and throw all their zeal and all their faith behind one side or other in every major conflict?

It is easy to see that both kinds of Christian ought to exist and flourish; and that each kind ought to be tolerant of the other. But those who have chosen to retire into their ghettoes genuinely believe that the only good they themselves can do is by prayer, self-amendment and the active of their neighbour. It is absurd to think that this is an easy option: neither option is easy if it is taken seriously worked at with a devout and loving than demonstrate, or to show an affective love for one's friend than to sit on committees which try to change the laws of one's

I doubt if there is anything in this for those who still yearn for a return to Christian orthodoxy. I am sure there is nothing in it for those Christians who were so eager to come to terms with the modern himself for the sake of making their faith seem more acceptable. The new believers come to church or they may not. The least they believe if they call themselves Christians, is that God was in Jesus Christ and that God is working in them.

They believe that Jesus was not a social or political revolutionary but a moral and spiritual revolutionary. They believe, that He is risen, and that they too can be reborn in love and truth.

Who needs indexed pensions?

Certainly some of the top business executives don't. They're well looked after. Like the Chairman of the Board of a major company who retired recently on a pension estimated at $81,000 per year plus a lump sum payment of $575,000.

It's easy for persons in 'special' circumstances to warn against the takeover of the private pension system by government. But what about you? The average retired civil servant, for example, has a pension of only $5,486 per year.

Canada has come a long way in serving all its citizens. Let's be sure that on retirement all Canadians are looked after financially. After all, they made Canada a great country.

Soviets To Vie For Oil?

WASHINGTON (WP) —
The White House Monday declassified a Central Intelligence Agency report that predicts the Soviet-Union will be competing with the rest of the world for Middle Eastern oil

"We estimate that the Soviet Union and eastern Europe will require a minimum of 3.5 million barrels per day of imported oil by 1995," the CIA report said. "At worst, slumping production could lead to import requirements as large as 4.5 million barrels a day." At present, the Soviet Union supplies eastern Europe with most of its crude oil.

By 1982, the CIA report predicts, Soviet oil fields will reach their maximum output of 11 million to 12 m llion barrels a day. Before 1985, the CIA report goes on, Soviet oil production will begin what the CIA calls a "sharp decline."

CIA calls a "snapp decime."

The CIA report says that China cannot be expected to take up any of the slack in world oil trade in the next 10 years. The CIA said that by 1980 China will be exporting no more than 500,000 barrels of oil a day, scarcely a trickle in a world the CIA said will be using more than 70 million barrels a day in fewer than 10 years.

"In China, the reserve and production outlook is much less favorable than it appeared a few years ago," the report said.

Carter On Energy

Clearly anticipating a long and brutal sturggle to gain congressional approval of his energy plan, Carter also made ar-direct appeal to the populace to resist efforts to dilute his proposals.

"If they succeed, then the burden on the ordinary citizen, who is not organized into an interest group, would be crushing," he added.

While the president made no specific proposals Monday night, he did set out seven goals of his energy program and 10 principles which he said guided its development.

He established 1985 as the target year for achieving the goals, the first of which is to slow the United States' rate of growth in energy consumption from the 4.5 per cent a year it was in 1976 to less than 2 per

The other goals the president set in the energy message would:

-Reduce gasoline consumption, currently 7 million barrels a day, by 10 per cent:

-Cut the amount of oil the U.S. imports to 6 million bar-rels a day. Currently, the U.S. imports 9 million barrels day and Carter said this could grow to 16 million barrels a

-Establish a strategic petroleum reserve of 1 billion barrels, enough to last six —Extend solar energy, now in use in some 5,000 homes, to 2.5 million homes.

Interviews with congressional leaders following the president's address indicate president's address indicate Carter will have an uphill fight in getting many of his proposals through Congress, especially his expected call for higher taxes on energy sources.

"It will be the toughest fight of his four years in the Write House," said Senator Abraham Ribicoff (Dem. Gonn.). And House Majority Leader Jim Wright (Dem. Tex.), said: "Conservation is necessary but it's only half the job. I hope he couples his conservation preachments with some practical programs to stimulate the development of new energy sources."

All these activities and more took place last weekend, thanks to radio hams working out of Building 219 in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt. One of the oldest buildings in the establishment, the 70-foot directional beam antenna atop its roof is the tip-off that this is the "shack" of the Base Amateur Radio Service.

WO Allen Fast of HMCS Cape Breton and Don Cosby retired naval chief warrant officer, were on duty on the The San Diego-bound destroyers HMCS Qu'Appelle, HMCS Mackenzie and HMCS Yukon, were the first contacted.

BARS president, WO Jim Durrance, speaking from the Qu'Appelle, described the first two days at sea as_"very windy with short and choppy waves which, when heading into them made the pitching motion very bad.'

Then Vancouver sea cadet David Romanovski told his mother he was "one of the few (sea cadets) who didn't get Esquimalt-based vessels and there are about 25 shore-based BARS members. The club, whose call letters are VE7CFB-7. was formed in 1972.

For the first time it took a major role in communications covering the annual Swiftsure classic in 1976 and will help again this year.

"We had one station at Race Rocks, two at the Royal Victoria Yacht (one at the club house and one at the Ogden Point headquarters), two aboard RVYC patrol vessels, three operators out at Swiftsure aboard the Porte de la Reine, an operator aboard the (U.S. Coast Guard cutter) Point operator aboard the (U.S. Coast Guard cutter) Point Countess and one here at the base station," Fast reported.

Both he and Cosby stressed the club's interest in Swift-sure is not reporting boat positions, although they do help RVYC keep a plot with the information they relay.

'Our main interest is safety, that's the important thing,"

This weekend they had another type of competition on the schedule, an international dart tournament between the Dock-yard Recreation Association's Roadrunners and Ton 80, a dart club than plays in a dart pub at Poway, outside San Diego.

Club member Jim Nichols, handled a station at the Dockyard Recreation Association's hall on Admirals, while the dockyard shack using shortwave, took it from there. Another radio ham in Poway completed the communications kind, was WO Dennis Moore, who had become friends with the Ton 80 players while aboard HMCS Gatineau in San Diego. He had issued the challenge from the Roadrunners.

The Californians won by three points.

But the local dart shooters were elated. Thanks to the blunteers in Building 219 they had made new friends and taken part in a "first.

Young Offers Compromise

ne next round in the great sewage disposal debate comes at a special meeting of the Capital Region Board on Wednesday with Victoria Mayor Mike Young offering a compromise answer.

He will propose that instead of building a controversial pumping station at Shoal Bay and a big new trunk line from there to Clover Point, existing lines within Oak Bay and the city be connected and entive route to Clover Point.

That plan would require a way's store on Foul Bay Road together with replacement of 11,500 feet of small sewer from Fort Street to Clover

The events began Tuesday night when the CBC, on its program Find Estate, said a number of convonies listed on the Vancouver Stock Exchange were rising in price without having any a velopments to support the increased value.

Prices for all stocks named fell sharply Wednesday but began to recover on Thurs-

The price of Super Scoop, however, fell on Friday and again Monday. Grey said it appeared to be a reaction to the article in Canadian Business Service, which is distrib-uted across the country.

then says of the CBC television program: "If you missed that edition of the Fifth Estate, though, don't worry about it. Interesting as it was, it offered nothing really new on the subject of schemes designed to separate the gullible from their money. (But) It did reveal a few new twists.

The article continues: "A former junior mining company had a device for turning out perfectly round 2¼-inch spheres of ice cream. The promoter figured he could revolutionize the ice cream business with this gadget and expressions of interest from every major dairy in North America, though he of course did not care to name any of them (if nothing else, the man-deserves a place in the Guinness Book of World Records for his talent at keep-ing a straight face.)"

Grey said the comment was "a cheap shot and untrue." He said the company has al-rady announced that Palm Danies will be merchandising

"That me they are talking about in the article although neither I nor the company are mentioned by name. I always wanted to get into the Guinness Book of World Records but I didn't expect in would be this way. The TV program was bad because it was slanted and this article in Canadian Business Service is worse because it is based on the TV program with no effort being made to check the Business Service later con-firmed its written comments were based entirely upon the

The committee chairman said the three regional governments involved in the plan have asked for time to study it and several unions want to look it over. He said the plan probably will receive final ap-proval within a few weeks.

Economic Council Changes?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employer's Council of British Columbia recommends restructuring the Economic Council of Canada to form a broader Canadian advisory council as part of the federal government's post anti-infla-tion controls program.

The council, in its second brief this year on decontrol, said the economic council's current work should be expanded to include analysis of short and medium term economic concerns. The economic council now is limited by law to studying the medium-to-long term scene.

"Provincial advisory groups feeding into the 25-member national body would ensure adequate representation from all sectors of Canadian soci-ety." said the brief, released

A wild weekend of violence and dispute on the hustings—a scrap between players and fans in a pro basketball playoff game at Oakland . . Tony Trabert taking after a protester at Newport Beach with his tennis racquet as a weapon . . baseball umpires walking off the field at Atlanta in protest over the showing of a replay of a controversial decisin on the big screen . . . and who could expect the hockey fans in Toronto to be very happy either? It was rather unfortunate the Leafs blew that game to Philadelphia Flyers in the final minutes Sunday. They had played well enough to deserve better. But you can't fake anything away from the Flyers. Their comeback was a great one, and maybe even better than the one they came up with last Friday. Oh, oh, to be a Leaf fan today.

So, it's an old saw, but no hockey game is over until the So, it's an old saw, but no hockey game is over until the final whistle has blown... and neither is a basketball game over until the ball, that is in the air when the final whistle blows, has come to rest... And that was just as good a finish in the NBA playoff between Philadelphia 76ers and Boston Celtics as anyone would want to see too... And that came about when the Celtics came from far back to squeak out a two-point decision on Jo-Jo White's basket after time was up. The ball had barely left White's hand when the clock ran out but it dropped through the boop to sink Philadeldelphia in that one, as there was in Oakland. And the obvious reason was the fact that regular referees weren't on hand for the playoffs . . . They were on strike and outside with picket

The players were taking liberties with the fill-in officials, something they wouldn't normally do; and the coaches were equally as guilty, probably more so, for their lack of control. The Boston-Philadelphia game didn't erunt, but it was only one punch away from doing so, and why the coaches weren't handed technicals, I'll never know... Certainly, if the regular officials had been on hand, the coaches wouldn't have got a control the state of the state o ten away with what they did. So the sooner they settle this hassle the better, and before someone gets hurt... It was brutal under the baskets . And then in the post a missive from the Seattle SuperSonics who didn't make it into the playoff round . . . and coach Bill Russell, though disappointed, sees hope for the future.

"We started the year with high hopes so I can't say I'm ased," said Russell. "In building a team you have to have patience. This team is not that far away from being a good team." Incidentally, the Sonics had 16 sellout crowds this past season and played to 92 per cent capacity at home . . .

Congratulations are due, again, for Victoria's Philip Dele pommel horse and a third over-all, his best performance ever in this world-class competition. But ABC's Jim McKay had his wires crossed when he explained that Philip had government financial backing which is why he could train all the time . . .

Like all other Canadian Olympc athletes, Philip's Canadian Olympic Association grant ran out the day the Olympics ended, and all he gets is a Student aid grant of $600 a year . . . which is just to keep the record straight . . .

So, otherwise, Jack Nicklaus won another golf tournament and, for a guy who says he isn't playing well, he is doing better than all right, and better than most others too. That was quite a round Australia's Graham Marsh had going — nine under after 11 holes — but then he proved that pros are human after all. Three straight bogies ended his deam and he had to settle for a share of third place...but nine under after 11...that soon won't be forgotten...

And now, once more, it's Team Canada's turn in the European way of the world hockey championships... and judging by pre-tournament results, it could be another sad week

Jim's Line Swings Up On Chart of Progress

Jim Rutledge, still a junior, is aware of swings. They include the kind it takes to hit a golf ball, and the kind that is

The swing on the chart of progress is the one that interests Rutledge.

A member of both Cedar Hill and Uplands, Rutledge was the youngest player ever to win the City Junior cham-plonship. He was 14 when he won the title in 1974.

He repeated in 1975 and it looked as if Rutledge was in a position to become the first four-time winner of the junior crown. Dave Rands of Uplands quashed the possibility by winning the title last year.

Rutledge who will be 12 on aug. 20, completes his junior eligibility this year and still has a chance of becoming a three-time winner. Only three others — Jimmy Squire, Ken Lea and Gary Smith — have managed the feat. Rutledge writes off last year as "a bad one." His scores were inconsistent and victories became scarce.

The Oak Bay High student feel he hit a downward trend on the chart of progress. Since the age of 12, the progress line consistently showed a gain. There were occasional leveling-off stretches but never a dip down . . . until last year.

"I sort of expected it," said Rutledge, "but didn't think it wuld be so evident or last so long."

"I hove it's over."

"I hope it's over. Rutledge concedes that growing may have been a factor in his performances of last year. Now five-foot-10, he has added almost five inches to his height in the past two years.

He hopes the drastic swing-adjusting period is over.
His progress in the 1977 Vancouver Island Open championship might support that hope. He qualified safely with a seven-over 77 at Oak Bay but has been more impressive in his first two matches.

He defeated Uplands' Dave McCall, also a former City Junior champion, 2 and 1. Last Sunday Rutledge posted a two-up victory over Sandy Harper, the former B.C. junior king from Nanaimo.

Both matches had to be considered toss-ups, and that is how it may be when Rutledge meets Jeff Jones of Colwood in next Sunday's quarter-final round at Glen Meadows.

If the line on Rutledge's chart is indeed on the rise again.

OTTAWA — The Opposition failed Monday to get formal approval of a motion censuring the government's handling of the unemployment situa-tion, but there was general agreement on Parliament Hill embarrassed by the move. Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark instigated the motion to adjourn the House of Commons several-hours early, as a form of protest against what he called 'the refusal of the government to take any new action to deal with the record-breaking unemployment."

There are 264 seats in the House, but there were 100 MPs absent for the vote.

Monday was the first day back for MPs after an 11-day Easter recess and the fact that the jobless totals were announced during the break kept opposition tempers simmering for a few days.

The Tory leader said one of the causes of disunity in Canada is unemployment, notably the regional concentration east of Ontario. And, picking up on a brief remark Prime Minister Trudeau made recently in Toronto, he said it becomes more and more obvious that "the position of the government ... continues to be that if the unemployed want jobs, they should leave the country."

Now, we have all had traumatic experiences associated with food. I, for example, since my graduation from col-leg, have never been able to eat turkey tetrazzini, wilted lettuce salad, chicken chow mein, Spanish omelette or lyonnaise potatoes, all of which I experienced for the first (and last) 150 times in the college cafeteria. Ralph has been trying to convince me for many years now that turkey tetrazzini is really very good, but I know very well that it is made with five parts gray congealed gravy over two parts funny-tasting noodles and Government Surplus turkey unmentionables.

I am also grossly suspicious of anything labelled "roast beef au jus." ("Some oh jew?" the cheerful kitchen server - with ladle full of brown grease poised over plate of gristle — used to say to each girl.) I just have such negative associations to these foods that no matter how well they're prepared now they don't taste good to me.

It's the same principle with Ralph and submarine sandwiches, but his story was so tragic it made me weep. Under the circumstances, I would never threaten him with a submarine sandwich just to get my way — unless, of course, it was really impor-

Back-to-Land Possible Even in Hawaii

Contrary to popular belief, say Skye and Hollis Osborn and Beverley Beauclerk, the tropical state of Hawaii is not reserved just for natives, vacationers or the very wealthy. Back-to-the-landers can find a place for themselves in the Pacific paradise, too — especially if they'll skip seven of the main islands that make up the state . . . and head straight for the biggest: Ha-

Here's their report:

Living and growing our own on farms in Idaho and Oregon was better, than staying coped up in some city. But a long siege of 20-below weather a few winters back finally chilled our enthusiasm fo even the country life . . . if it had to be lived up north.

had to be lived up north.
So our family of three (mother, father, and 10-year-old) set out on a hunt for sunshine in our bus. And a month later — after we'd sold the bus for plane fare — we found it: in Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, in the state of

Yes, Honolulu hand sun-shine all right . . . and mag-nificent mountains and sandy beaches. But it also had free-ways, traffic, high rents, and too much cement.

So we began a search of the outer islands. Five months, two islands, and a lot of frustrations later, we found a small house on the island of

Although it was situated alongside a spectacular river and very close to the local medicine man, this new place we called home still fell far short of being the small tropi-cal paradise — with gardens and goats — we wanted to call our own. And, there seemed little chance we'd be able to afford anything better as long as we stayed in Ha-

Best of all, this little mid-Pacific Shangri-La was really located out in the country too: seven and a half miles from a small village and one and a half miles up what darn near qualified as a road

Our long search for a mini-farmstead washed by warm trade winds and bathed by the tropical sun was finally over, nearly a year after it had started. Now it was time for the hard work to begin!

The gardens we had inherited, although adequate for herbs and legumes, were much too small for our grandiose plans. So we hauled in bigasse — the crushed, left-over canes from which sugar over canes from winer august has been extracted — that the big mills out here are glad to get rid of. When combined with good chicken manure, compost, and whatever other organic material we can find, this vegetable matter eventu-ally rots down into a decent, workable soil.

We quickly discovered, however, that our mini-farming experiences back in Idaho and Oregon had not really provided us with an ounce of practical knowledge about the growing of greenies in the equatorial zones of the world— especially on postage stamp-sized gardens, and particularly when those tiny plots are endowed with a great deal Only about one quarter of the tidier plot. We also started all our new seeds in flats (thus saving our garden's precious soil for just the plants that sprouted and also making it possible for us to "succession plant" more crops into the vegetable plot every year).

Next we threw out the straight, well-spaced rows of the traditional produce patch in favor of intensive garden-ing. And, as we transferred ing. And, as we transferred each of the sprouted sets into our walled plot, we placed a large quantity of both organic fertilizer and ground shells under it.

Unwelcome weeds were pulled and fed to the chickens ... who shredded and ate the weeds, and then mixed their resulting droppings into the stray amounts of earth to make a rich additive that we put back on the garden. Nice

In the meantime, we glean all the information we can from hitchhikers, librarians, postal workers and gardeners about the 4,038 square miles of this big island. There's of this big island. There's honest-to-goodness desert, rain forest, mountains (two 13,000-foot-tall volcances — Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea — are even capped by winter snows), and cultivated farmlands here and we want to learn all we can about them while our "land purchase" pennies pile up.

Luckily for us, the parcels

Luckily for us, the parcels of land for sale that we find most desirable (the bigger lots that are farthest from the main highways) ... are also the least expensive! And, since the local power com-pany now charges $1,300 to set in a single utility pole, the chances of suburbia encroach-ing on the unelectrified homestead of our dreams seems relatively slim during the next few decades.

As we look for "just the right place" we, of course, keep some very typically Ha-waiian considerations uppermost in our minds:

There is more old lava rock on this island than most newcomers ever imagine, and we want to be sure that the land we buy is covered with a thick layer of real dirt. Nor has there been an end to the formation of that lava!

five chickens, and two Emotional Well-Being A Part of Good Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A cousin of mine, who was in perfect health, committed suicide. He was married, had two children, a good job and was well off financially. The family keeps rehashing this tragedy, wondering what we did to cause it or did not do that could have prevented it.

—Mrs. E.Y., S.D.
Dear Mrs. Y.:

Dear Mrs. Y.:

The key word in your letter is, of course, "perfect." Obviously, your cousin was not in perfect health. For perfect health means perfect physical and emotional well-being. These he did not have.

You and your family are now adding to the pain of this catastrophe your own sense of guilt for not having been able to prevent this. Suicide presents many questions. Why does someone decide to take his own life? Are there early signs by which the potential suicide can be recog-nized? Could his life have been redirected and rehabili-tated? Who should assume this responsibility?

The precipitating factors for the impulse to suicide may be any of a number of things. Incurable disease, loneliness. unrequited love, loss of wealth or status, the humiliation of having to live with an unacceptable social situation. As close as you were to your cousin, you probably had no knowledge of the emotional turbulence within his life.

himself. Had any of his emo-tional needs been evident and had the warning signs of emotional stress been apparent, professional guidance by a psychiatrist or psychologist might have prevented the despair leading to his decision.

In the post-mortem analysis of today's deal, it was revealed that South had fulfilled a game contract that would have been defeated if West had been a more imaginative player. Can you isolate West's 'lack of imagination'?

After West had opened the club king, upon which East played the nine, he continued with the ace of clubs, East dropping the five. West now paused to study the situation. He knew, of course, that there were no more clubs around the table. Finally he made the neutral lead of a diamond, dummy's queen winning. A trump was then led, South's king falling to West's ace. Had West been a more imaginative player, he would have foreseen that a diamond lead at trick three (which West had made) couldn't ever West had made) couldn't ever be the winning play. A heart lead instead would also have peen a poor choice, since South, for his jump to four spades, surely had the heart ace. West's hope, at trick three, should have been that East had a trump holding that might promote West's ter into a winner. At trick three, West should

At trick three, West should have led a third club. If dummy ruffed, East would overruff, and declarer would overruff, and declarer would overruff East with the jack. It dummy didn't ruff, East would; and, again, South would overruff with the jack. Declarer would then have entered dummy via a red suit, to lead a trump. He would put up his queen and West would take trick with the ace. A fourth club lead

West would take trick with the ace. A fourth club lead would now be made, and East would ruff with his remaining trump. South would overtrump with the king — and simultaneously. West's ten of trumps would become the highest-ranking trump left in the deck.

Even if, in theory East had but the singleton jack of trumps (a definite possibility), by trumping the third club lead with that card, thus forcing South to overtrump with the queen, West's ten of trumps would be promoted into a winner. But West slipped in his defense.

Saanich Tries Night Meetings will hold its council meetings at night for a trial period of six months.

The change from afternoon to evening meetings is one of the planks in the "open door" platform Ald. John Mika has been advocating since last November's election.

Mika delivered a blistering attack on his fellow aldermen, however, when the decision to try evening meetings was made Monday.

On the advice of municipal solicitor Doug Patterson, the council decided not to amend its procedure bylaw as Mika had wanted, but make some changes through resolution. Mika accused his fellow addermen of "ambushing" his proposals." All the guts have been taken out of it," he said.

A problem garden is the legacy of the fair-weather gardener who ventures outdoors only when conditions are suitable to strolling around in shirtsleeves or housedress.

A carefree garden belongs to the gardener who is conscious of what is happening to the plants when conditions are not conducive to human com-

Gardening on the west coast of Canada and the off-shore of Canada and the off-shore islands is widely reputed to be a year-around hobby.

This does not mean we are out working in the garden every day of the year. Rather, we have discovered that full enjoyment of a garden is realized from a daily den is realized from a daily tour regardless of the weather, plus careful observa-tion of what is happening to

The gardener who stays indoors when strong winds are blowing may fail to notice a newly planted shrub or tree that has toppled, a support stake which has snapped, a

MAN 'DEAD' FOR 72 DAYS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stanley Wilks, a civilian mathematician for the U.S. Army, spent 72 days in suspended animation in a successful effort by doctors to save his life.

Physicians at George Washington University Hospital had to find a way for Wilks' body to fight off pancreatitis and infections that were killing him.

Wilks was intentionally paralysed with the drug curare, a substance used by some Brazilian Indian tribes on their blowgun darts. Doctors hoped the use of the drug on their bloggin darks. Doctors hoped that does the would save his life.

Wilks' wife Jocelyn consented to the curare treatment.

"It seemed like a reasonable option at the time," she said.

After receiving the curare treatment the 44-year-old Wilks lay conscious between Jan. 8 and March 20, but he was unable to move an eye, blink, utter a sound, move a muscle or breathe without the help of a respirator.

Now he is reported recovering and soon may be released from the hospital. Neither Wilks no Dr. Glenn Geelhoed, the attending Neither Wiks no Dr. Glein Geelhoed, the attention physician, know what caused the onset of his pancreatitis last November. "He was as sick as one could be," Dr. Geelhoed said. "He had a pseudo cyst, which means his pancreas was eating itself and everything around it."

The pancreas produces the enzymes that digest food, and if the enzymes back up it can begin to digest itself and the organs which are near it.

Wilks' hospital bill was estimated at between $150,000 and $250,000, but will be covered by a health plan.

"I hope it's over."

Rutledge concedes that growing may have been a factor in his performances of last year. Now five-foot-10, he has added almost five inches to his height in the past two years.

He hopes the drastic swing-adjusting period is over.

His progress in the 1977 Vancouver Island Open championship might support that hope. He qualified safely with a seven-over 77 at Oak Bay but has been more impressive in his first two matches.
